BDT 2025 · Marrakech

Written for the 2026 countdown to BDT 2026 in Scottsdale

This memory comes from our most recent tour to Marrakech. On Day I, after some initial confusion around where we could and could not drink within the villa grounds, Dave Bryson demonstrated great initiative by ensuring that, surreptitiously, we were kept wellwatered throughout the afternoon (although we perhaps did not fully appreciate at that stage that he was watering himself more than anyone!). He and fellow Virgin Tom settled in marvellously and a fabulous first day was had by all.

The following morning saw us take team buses to the first golf track, Assoufid. With this being one of Marrakech's most exclusive clubs (where we were also scheduled to dine that evening), before the tour Buzz and I had been at pains to ensure that our hosts, particularly the Director of Golf Guy Maxwell, knew that we were a group of professionals. This would help to allay any concerns over such a big group of guys turning up and bringing down the tone.

As we disembarked from the buses, I noticed a few of the Bloodhounds looking more than a little concerned and all I heard from the Big Man was "Dave's not in a good way" (that turned out to be the understatement of the year!). It transpired that Dave had managed to faint, throw up (on himself and on Langers) and sh*t himself! Extraordinary scenes from Bryson and as a result he will be forever known as Bryson DeSchambles! Meanwhile the Retriever bus had had its own issues with Robbo also desperately trying not to further poo himself having encountered his own "control" issues earlier in the day!

I was about to head over to the Bloodhound bus to see what was going on with Dave but before I knew it Guy (who had clearly come out to scope out our group!) had wandered over to introduce himself to me. To make the right impression I beckoned to DT to come over and meet Guy, as he had been kind enough to let DT use his tour card to play gratis and we felt that the fellow pros could talk shop to settle us in nicely.

Just as DT was echoing my words about what a great bunch of lads we were, Buysai waddled past us, escorted (and propped up) by a couple of Bloodhounds, looking truly terrible and sporting his brand-new white tour shorts in which he quite clearly soiled himself!

DT and I tried to maintain our conversation with Guy but we were all momentarily stunned and speechless. Feeling very awkward we had little choice but to make our excuses and leave him to it to go and buy Bryson a replacement pair of whites!

We like our Virgins to make an impression and it would be fair to say that Dave certainly did that and not just in his pants!
