DT's Charity Evening

34

BDT 2012 · Marbella · Featuring DT & Coxy

Written for the 2026 countdown to BDT 2026 in Scottsdale

▶ Watch: The Fashion Kicks Event

For BDT 2012 Villa el Canine was the setting for the tour's second visit to Marbella. However, unbeknownst to the London boys, the Northern contingent were encountering some severe difficulties and came dangerously close to missing their flight!

DT had (bravely, or perhaps foolishly) agreed to attend the "Fashion Kicks" charity event at Lancashire County Cricket Club, where the host was Shay Given and some of DT's other celebrity pals were in attendance.

The Rattlesnake ended up going full tilt at this event such that he turned in around 5am completely smashed and certainly not in a fit state for his scheduled 4am minibus pick-up by Coxy. After almost an hour of first of all trying to find DT, then rouse DT, then move DT into the minibus, then keep DT standing up straight through airport customs, incredibly he did make it on to his flight.

Upon his arrival at Malaga the London boys noted that DT was still completely smashed, so Lord only knows what state he had been in four hours earlier! The northern contingent, and Coxy in particular, deserved a medal for ensuring DT was with us and it is safe to say they were all ready for a beer! DT's own account of this episode is below and is well worth a read!!!

DT

"There's many an hour that we would all like to erase from the memory bank, but it has to be said mine was "not my finest 12 hours"!!!

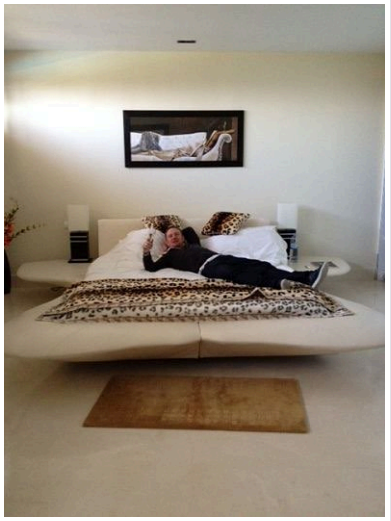

The year was Marbella 2012, our 1st year at the amazing "kennel" we went on to have for the next couple of years. I was proud to be travelling to this particular Big Dogs Tour as Captain of the Mighty Bloodhounds. My mistake however was to attend a good friend's Charity Ball the night before our early departure (c6am Flight) to Spain.

Fully aware that it was an early start I had already arranged with the one and only Coxy to kindly collect me from my hotel in Manchester which was near to Lancashire County Cricket Club, where the Charity event was being held. Coxy said he would collect me from the hotel at c4am so we could get to Liverpool Airport in good time to meet the Northern lads of which most were my team. I thought "perfect"! Attend the event and show my support to my good friend, leave the event at midnight, head back to the hotel and have a couple of hours sleep in preparation for Coxy picking me up at 4am. WRONG!!!!!!!

After a hectic day coaching and rushing round getting my stuff packed for the Big Dogs trip, I headed to the hotel to get checked in and ready for a great, but what I had planned to be a quiet, night at the Event. Needless to say the night didn't go as quietly as I had planned, in fact it couldn't have been further from quiet!!

After every great event comes an even better after party to which I went and consumed even more red wine and basically any alcohol I could get down my neck! My biggest regret of that night was to completely lose track of time!

The after party was in full flow, the banter was flying and the drinks out of control at this point, I was dancing away on the dance floor with the rest of the after party when all of a sudden I am face to face with COXY!!!

DT finally arises from his slumbers!

"Where the f have you been! I have been to your hotel you weren't there! I have been calling you and you haven't answered your phone (no service!). I have been stood outside for half hour asking security if I can come in and get my friend! (They told me NO, there's no one in there they have all gone home!) (we hadn't it was just select few who were still there) now get a fing move on we are going to miss this flight".

At that point I think F - Big Dogs trip!! I'd better get myself sorted!!

Coxy was doing his best to get me out of the place and back to the hotel for me to get changed and pick up my case and clubs for the Big Dogs trip! I could barely stand up at this point and Coxy was going mad at me (with every good reason!). We finally got into a cab (not the original one we had by the way as this had to leave for another job!) and head for Liverpool airport!

Next thing I know Coxy was shouting "DT wake up we are here!" (no response from me). "DT wake the f up we are here and we have to rush to get this flight or we will miss it!!!" (one eye open I say ok mate!) (I think) open the door (or maybe he opened it) I fell flat on my face out of the cab, scrabbling to my feet, with the help of Coxy dragging me by one arm, I grabbed my case and clubs (or maybe Coxy got these for me??).

We started walking into the main terminal, me still not aware what day it is let alone where the foooook I was flying to! The Northern lads at this point were waiting for us, amongst them several of my team members who were awaiting the arrival of their Team Captain for the week; they take one look at me and say "you're taking the p!ss aren't you?! You're not that drunk!!" Coxy replies "he fing is! Now we better checked in for this flight!".

I think I am right in saying that Buzz (I think it was) had to hold me upright as I checked in for the flight! Thankfully they let me on and, albeit after a terrible journey during the entirety of which I had my head down on the table, we arrived in Malaga Airport.

Still totally wrecked I tried to sample some beers with the lads at the airport before the transfer to the Kennel. On arrival to the Kennel I was still totally fecked and had to spend the first afternoon of tour welded to the bed in my room. It was c4pm when I thought "right you better get your sh*t together here as you are the Captain of this team and have a speech to make at the OC!".

Thankfully I did pull myself round just in time for the OC and to get myself totally blitzed again that night (although I didn't need much to top up!!!!).

That, guys, to date, is my "Not My Finest Hour"."

DT was soon back to normal!