You Are A Big Dog

BDT 2004 · Lagos · Featuring Ravo & Marshy

Written for the 2026 countdown to BDT 2026 in Scottsdale

Another moment where one of the Dogs got himself into a bit of a pickle came on BDT 2004 to Lagos. Ravo tells the story in his own words!

RAVO

"Place: Lagos, Portugal

Time: approx 4.30 am

Situation: in the doorway of a random club in Lagos

Conditions: dark

A tour memory that will last with me forever was the breakdown in communication between myself and a BIG dog on the second night of BDT 2004.

Escape Nightclub

Ravo's reward for his compliment!

A select few of the BDTourists were leaving the club at the end of an enjoyable evening, the remainder of the BDTourists who shall remain nameless were long gone (predominantly Retrievers), tucked up in bed and dreaming of the Ryder Cup and the day's golf ahead.

Stood in the doorway of the club, I looked around to check that, as agreed, the entire party was there to ensure we all travelled home together, safely. All bar one tourist was out of the club. The one remaining, who shall remain nameless, was trying to CHEAT the agreed plan, not because he wanted to drink (acceptable), but because he wanted to practice his Eastern European chat on some unsuspecting 'dog eared' bird (unacceptable).

After informing the practising linguist of his tardiness and general cheating, unbecoming of the superior breed of Bloodhound, I complimented the doorman by suggesting that he was a "Big Dog".

For some quite unknown reason the doorman took offence at this compliment - he was spooked - and proceeded to kick the hole off me! In one hazy memory as I was lying flat out on the floor I recall thinking "gosh, it's taking the fellow dogs a long time to pile in" and then at the point the doorman kindly removed his fist from my head and foot from my ribs, I hot-footed it out of there.

On the way home, the true spirit of the BDT came out. Daniel (it must have been early on tour for him to be out so late) Marshy (a Retriever) helped me (a Bloodhound) by splashing the blood off my face with the estuary water. Between the laughs (him) and tears (me), we managed to find our way home.

It goes without saying that the remainder of the tour was an absolute cracking success, despite the shiner in front of a client the next day and the apology to the Big Dog!"
