Written for the 2026 countdown to BDT 2026 in Scottsdale

BDT 2016, AKA "The Brexit Tour", was held in Mallorca and we had four virgins on board, in Rick, Marcus, Glenn and Lordy. In the story that follows, "a Virgin's View", Lordy provides an epic recollection of his first (and, to date, only) BDT.

LORDY

"The year was 2016 and there was a lot of political uncertainty at home as we boarded the flight for what was my first foray into the world of the legendary Big Dogs Tour.

My 'lookalikey' David Cameron had left Theresa May and Blighty up the proverbial Sh*t Creek as we were heading on our way to Mallorca. For a brief moment in time the tour had a temporary name of the BBDT, The Big Brexit Dogs Tour.

I have trawled through my phone to see some of the early messages after being added to the WhatsApp group. Messages 3, 4 and 5 from Boysie read as follows:

1.	THE WHOLE THING WAS A JOHNSON PLOT
2.	The peasants are revolting
3.	Stick your London house prices up your arses!

Anyway, despite the uncertainty and the economy going into freefall, the BDT proved that it would not be influenced by these mere minor issues given the well-oiled machine that it is. Apart from the obligatory Wetherspoons brekkie, comprising several pints of San Miguel to get us into the Spanish mood, my first memory of the trip on Spanish soil was the copious slabs of San Miguel premium strength tinnies purchased at the airport. These 5.6% beauties (not the normal 5% ones) ensured that we had a pain free bus journey to the hotel. And what a hotel, far too good for any golf trip let alone the BDT!

Being one of four tour virgins I narrowly missed out on the Duncan Goodhew event. Perhaps the judging panel went easy on my Zinedine Zidane bald spot being a newcomer; Michael Phelps I am not, so was glad to avoid that one!

Obviously being in the group of tour virgins there was the obligatory challenge.

A few San Miguels

The Virgins are put through their paces

Onto Day II at Alcanada for the first round of golf, after which there followed a lovely BBQ on the terrace washed down with several glasses of the amber and pink nectars. The downing of a glass of rose was required and orders were given to strut a few moves in front of our fellow diners in our Hawaiian attire. Some dad dancing moves ensued which I now seem to recall that I continued later that evening with some of the more mature female diners!

Virgin Dancing

If I'm being honest this is pretty much about the most detail from the trip that I can remember. The rest became a bit of a blur from that night onwards!

Night 3 I got a bit too excited and, in the words of John 'Pot as many balls as you can' Virgo, I did this on the drink front and ended up with a short stay in hospital after doing a Triple Salchow with pike on the pavement.

Lordy's Triple Salchow

I have to doff my cap to fellow tour virgin Marcus Haigh who unselfishly travelled with me in the ambulance. After I'd finished my quick turbo nap I did a runner from the hospital leaving Haigh in the waiting room, having no recollection he was there! As with all trips, attention to detail like the name of the hotel was lacking but somehow I got back to the palatial establishment with two big eggs on my already sizeable noggin and just managed to tee it up a few hours later, somehow managing to take Little to the 18th before disappointingly losing. In truth I don't recall much of this round except for numerous short putts!

Having not been on any of the previous tours it's always difficult to judge the booziness and how it compares with other BDTs. However, looking through some of the old messages from BDT 2016 it had some of the vital ingredients of various Dogs missing in action, numerous items of lost property & faculties, quality & smelly banter, two DNFs from Purlo & Knoxy and a great guest appearance from BT! What more can you ask of the BDT?!"
