Skoda v Mercedes

78

BDT 2002 · Marbella · Featuring Boysie, Hursty, Robbo, Paddy, BT, Langers & Ash

Written for the 2026 countdown to BDT 2026 in Scottsdale

In our next memory, Boysie recalls a day in the life of the Inaugural Tourists from BDT 2002 to Marbella. This was a tour memorable for all sorts of reasons, not least Boysie's own creation of the memorable phrase: "BOYSIE'S UP!" during our beach volleyball sessions on Mistral Beach! Over to Boysie to take us through a standard day on the Inaugural Tour!

Mistral Beach – Scene of the legendary "BOYSIE'S UP"!!!

BOYSIE

"Skoda v Mercedes"

Location: Marbella House and the motorway between Marbella and Malaga
Weather: Blistering
Date: September 2002
Event: The Inaugural Tour

Having spent a very, very heavy night on the tiles this intrepid inaugural Dog (originally tourist) returned to Marbella House which was the accommodation for the duration of our seven day stay.

For a large part of that original tour we brave seven were accompanied by the "dogged" (in the sense of persistent) Rosie Watson and Alex Lloyd. I cannot now recollect either of these individuals with any real clarity such is the startling lack of impact either of them had on my life save for one incident which I shall later recount. These ladies had a greater impact upon some of my fellow inaugurals.

Alex & Rosie

By way of background BT was at the height of his pattering abilities, Robbo was lovelorn and Ash was still in the infancy of his now truly developed and magnificent c*ck blocking technique which I know that all Dogs have come to know and love.

My own arrival at Marbella House on this fateful morning had involved a small spot of breaking and entering as I was keyless. There could have been no question that I had entered the correct villa as BT was crooning along to Elvis' "Suspicious Minds", Langers No Wangers was muttering about having no underwear and Paddy was snoring while lying on a sun lounger located next to the plunge pool.

Monkey Hurst had returned to base and was keen for pranks to be played. It was at this point that he lifted the inert Dineen and sun bed into the plunge pool which could have led, but fortunately did not, to a drowning incident. Thank goodness that young Ash had retained his wits otherwise the Tour Rules would not have been drafted.

These high jinks, and not the 15 vodka lime and lemonades, led me to conclude that it was time for bed. I sauntered jauntily into the master suite which I was sharing with Robbo. The time was approximately 6am. I knew that BT had retired to Colditz having had a row with all and sundry about his antics in the Argentinean restaurant and I was aware that the only missing tourist was my "roomie". Unconcerned for his well-being, I fell asleep.

Some time later I was awoken by the noise of giggling and slurping. Ever curious and alert I opened an eye. The noises were emanating from the bed adjacent to my own. Wondering whether we were being burgled I made the conscious decision not to make any sudden or alarming movements.

To my surprise a woman's voice said "Oooh that tickles" at which a man, who I now know to be Nicholas William Roberts, began to chuckle. It was not a chuckle I recognised from my fellow tourist and a man I had known for 15 years. It was a primeval and beastly noise which bore testimony to the horrors that I feared I would have to endure.

Fellow Dogs; I can shed no light on what precisely Robbo was doing to cause such amusement and for those who witnessed the "lob" incident in Lagos they will be aware that in all likelihood it had nothing to do with his manhood. That thing is incapable of tickles.

Paddy's Pool!

The murmurings and mutterings continued for what seemed like an eternity and although it took a great effort to stifle laughter, particularly at Robbo's pillow talk, I can say with some certainty that the most alarming part of all concerned the manner in which "Big Ears" approached his victim's nipples.

Seemingly tenderness was not a word in Robbo's vocabulary at that time and for those of you who have witnessed the way in which the three-time Tour Champion approaches the consumption of a "Calippo" will no doubt be able to call to mind the precise manner and vigour in which he tackled what appeared, from my vantage point at least, to be an impressively pert pair of teats (or udders if you prefer).

Slowly the daylight grew stronger and mercifully Robbo passed out. Within a few short hours the seven of us had no option but to rouse ourselves and prepare to head to Atalaya, the venue of the second and final round of the Inaugural Tour.

Unfortunately Robbo, the man with the intimate working knowledge of the location of golf courses on the Costa Del Sol, remained overheated after his exertions earlier in the day and had neglected to secure proper directions to the course for the Dogs. Not a problem; the tee time was late in the afternoon and the departure time allowed travelling and warmup time.

Robbo models Rosie!

After one hour and 30 minutes of driving repeatedly along the same stretch of motorway between Marbella and Malaga the inaugural tourists learnt the following:

1. A Skoda Fabia can travel at speeds of up to 200km/h when I am at the wheel (that's what the clock said and I am sticking with it) (see FastestLaps.com);
2. A Mercedes A Class is incapable of maintaining the pace of the Skoda Fabia as evidenced by the call from Monkey Hurst to Robbo pleading that the Skoda slowed down because he could not keep up and he was "frightened" of rolling said Mercedes (Hursty is a mard ar$e) (see FastestLaps.com);
3. That Langers could have done with some wangers given how fast the cars were travelling; and
4. Robbo, nipples and directions do not make happy bedfellows.

Dogs; a snippet of the Inaugural Tour.
Barnabus